Description

I am developing a series of interactive lessons in French using “clickers” technology. The resource will provide intensive and targeted practice of specific points which our average PLC learner usually finds challenging.

The slide shows are devised in PowerPoint and run through the Turning Point software. Lessons can also be broadcast in the classroom as PowerPoint shows without the need for clickers, or distributed to students as handouts for self-directed study.

Clickers have the added benefit of better engaging the students by providing instant feedback on their performance and self-evaluation against overall group results. The lecturer can also glean information on the group’s performance or on an individual’s performance during the course of the lesson.
