Unaccompanied Minors: An Information Booklet

Researched and written by Dervla King, Centre for Social and Educational Research, DIT
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The author would like to thank the following people for their assistance with the compilation and production of the booklet: Gráinne Kinsella (Social Work Team for Separated Children who are Seeking Asylum), Sr. Joan Roddy (Refugee Project, Irish Commission for Justice and Peace), Dr. Jennifer Rylands (Psychology Service for Refugees and Asylum Seekers), Dug Cubie (Irish Refugee Council), Mary King (Dun Laoghaire Refugee Project), Ciara Smith (UNHCR), Heino Schonfeld, Caroline Healy and Anne Heffernan (Barnardos), and the staff of the Centre for Social and Educational Research, DIT, especially Dr. Lorna Ryan and Nathalie Sire. Finally, thanks to all the organisations that contributed information about their services.

While every effort has been made to include the various organisations that work with unaccompanied minors, new groups are being formed regularly, with the result that any such list becomes outdated quickly. It is hoped that the booklet will be used as a basic reference that can be added to and amended as necessary. Space has been provided at the end of the booklet for this purpose.
SECTION 1

DEFINITIONS

Who is a refugee?
Under the terms of the 1951 Geneva Convention, a refugee is defined as a person who has fled his or her country and is unwilling or unable to return because of a well founded fear of being persecuted for reasons of race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group or political opinion.

Under Article 1(1) of the 1996 Refugee Act (as amended), the term "membership of a particular social group" has been extended to include membership of a trade union and membership of a group of persons whose defining characteristic is their belonging to the male or female sex or having a particular sexual orientation.

Who is an asylum seeker?
An asylum seeker is a person who has applied to be granted refugee status. Under the Geneva Convention, Ireland is obliged to examine each application for asylum that is lodged in the country. Anyone who is waiting for a decision to be made about his/her application is therefore legally allowed to reside in the country.

Who is an unaccompanied minor?
According to Section 8(5) of the 1996 Refugee Act (as amended), an unaccompanied minor is a child under age 18 who has arrived at the frontiers of the State or entered the State and who is not in anyone’s custody. The following definition is used by organisations including the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and UNICEF:

A person who is under the age of 18 or the legal age of majority, is separated from both parents, and is not with and being cared for by a guardian or other adult who, by law or custom, is responsible for him or her.
SECTION 2
THE RIGHTS OF UNACCOMPANIED MINORS

International provisions concerning unaccompanied minors

• The UN Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC): The CRC, which was ratified by Ireland in 1992, contains specific reference to the rights of unaccompanied minors. According to Article 22(1)
  States Parties shall take appropriate measures to ensure that a child who is seeking refugee status or who is considered a refugee in accordance with applicable international or domestic law and procedures shall, whether unaccompanied or accompanied by his or her parents or by any other person, receive appropriate protection and humanitarian assistance in the enjoyment of applicable rights set forth in the present Convention and in other human rights or humanitarian instruments to which the said States are Parties.

• Article 22(2) sets out the duties of the States to help the UN and other NGOs in protecting and assisting the child and helping him/her to obtain the necessary information for family reunification. It states that "in cases where no parents or other members of the family can be found, the child shall be accorded the same protection as any other child permanently or temporarily deprived of his or her family environment for any reason."

• Other relevant measures included in the Convention include Article 20(1), which refers to the duty of the State to provide special protection and assistance to children who are deprived of their family environment, and Article 39, which places an obligation on the State to facilitate the physical and psychological recovery and social integration of child victims.

• The 1997 Council of Europe Resolution on unaccompanied minors who are nationals of third countries (97/C/221/03): The resolution aims to establish guidelines for the treatment of unaccompanied minors, covering such areas as the conditions for their reception, stay and return.

• Article 3 sets out the minimum guarantees to which all unaccompanied minors should be entitled, including their right to necessary protection and basic care, their right to family reunification, to legal guardianship or representation, and to education and medical treatment.

• Article 4 covers the issue of asylum application procedures, including the accommodation of unaccompanied minors throughout the process and the way in which interviews should be conducted and applications assessed.

• Article 5 sets out provisions concerning the return of unaccompanied minors to their country of origin.

• Two annexes have been added to the Resolution, one which concerns measures to combat trafficking in minors, and the other which sets out measures to prevent their illegal entry into member States.

• The Statement of Good Practice (SGP) produced by the Separated Children in Europe Programme: The SGP aims to ensure that the rights of unaccompanied minors are respected at all stages of the asylum process. The Programme is a joint initiative of the Save the Children Alliance and the UN High Commissioner for Refugees, and involves 27 countries across Europe. The SGP sets out the commonly used definition of unaccompanied minors and discusses their various rights and entitlements, covering all areas from their arrival in a state to their entitlements when they enter the country. The guidelines contain specific provisions regarding registration and documentation, family reunification and care placements. In addition,

• Section 11 outlines the various legal entitlements that unaccompanied minors should have at all stages of the asylum application procedure.

• Section 12 discusses the minor’s entitlements after a decision has been made about his or her application.
Irish legislation and policies concerning unaccompanied minors

Irish legislation concerning unaccompanied minors, their rights and the treatment they should receive is contained in Sections 8(5) and 18 of the 1996 Refugee Act (as amended).

- Section 8(5)(a) states that if an immigration officer or authorised officer believes that a person under 18 years of age who is not in the custody of another person has arrived at the frontiers or in the State, she or he should inform the relevant health board as soon as possible. The minor will then be looked after according to the provisions set out in the 1991 Child Care Act.

- Section 8(5)(b) states that if the health board believes that the child needs to apply for refugee status, they should appoint someone who can make the application on behalf of the child. The health board is responsible for all costs, excluding legal ones, of any application that is made.

- Section 18 covers the issue of family reunification for people who have been granted refugee status. Refugees are allowed to apply to the Minister for Justice, Equality and Law reform for permission for a member of his or her family to enter and reside in Ireland. The Minister may also grant permission to a dependent member of the refugee’s family to enter and reside in the country. In the case of an unaccompanied minor, ‘dependent members’ may refer to his or her parents.

The 1991 Child Care Act, which is concerned with the welfare of children who are not receiving adequate care and protection, contains several provisions relevant to unaccompanied minors in Ireland.

- Article 3(2)(a) states that the health boards are responsible for identifying children who are not receiving adequate care and protection.

- Article 4(1) states that if a child who resides or is found in the area of a health board requires care or protection that s/he is unlikely to receive unless s/he is taken into care, it is the duty of the health board to take him or her into its care.

- Under Article 26 of the Act, a guardian ad litem service was established that provides for the appointment of a legal guardian to represent the interests of such children in court and to act as an independent voice in the care proceedings.

In addition, the National Children’s Strategy proposes that:

unaccompanied children seeking refugee status will be treated in accordance with best international practice, including the provision of a designated social worker and Guardian ad Litem.¹

As part of Objective K², the Strategy suggests that the special needs of non-English-speaking children should be recognised and that additional resources should be introduced that will enable them to more fully participate in mainstream school classes and activities.

² “Children will be educated and supported to value social and cultural diversity so that all children including Travellers and other marginalised groups achieve their full potential.” Ibid, 2000:70.
SECTION 3
BACKGROUND INFORMATION ON UNACCOMPANIED MINORS

The number of people applying for asylum in Ireland has been increasing steadily since the start of the 1990s, from 39 applications in 1992 to 10,938 in 2000. It is only over the past 2 years, however, that the number of unaccompanied minors seeking asylum in the country has shown any considerable increase. In 1999, 34 unaccompanied minors applied for asylum: there were 300 applications in 2000, while the number of applications received reached 425 in the first 7 months of 2001.

Statistical overview of unaccompanied minors seeking asylum in Ireland
According to the Office of the Refugee Applications Commissioner, a total of 300 unaccompanied minors applied for asylum in Ireland in 2000. Of this number, 201 were male and 99 female. In the first 7 months of 2001, 425 applications were made by unaccompanied minors, 261 of whom were male and 164 of whom were female.

In 2000, the main countries of origin were Nigeria (155 applicants), Romania (28 applicants), and Sierra Leone (20 applicants). They remained the primary countries of origin in the first 7 months of 2001. Other countries of origin include Algeria, Cameroon, and the Democratic Republic of Congo.

Why do unaccompanied minors apply for asylum in Ireland?
According to the Separated Children in Europe Programme, unaccompanied minors may be seeking asylum as a result of fear of persecution or lack of protection arising from human rights violations, armed conflict or disturbances in their own country. They may be the victims of trafficking for sexual or other exploitation, or they may have travelled to Europe to escape conditions of serious deprivation.³
SECTION 3 BACKGROUND INFORMATION ON UNACCOMPANIED MINORS

A Barnardos report on refugee and asylum seeking children⁴ states that many of them will have left behind difficult and sometimes traumatic situations, which places them in a particularly vulnerable position. Children can easily become separated from their parents in situations of conflict or flight. The UNHCR⁵ states that boys and girls who are on their own make easy targets for recruitment into armed groups, as combatants, porters, spies, or servants. In addition, they can be at high risk of exploitation, physical and sexual abuse, and even death.

According to a 1997 report by the UNHCR, unaccompanied or separated minors are one of the groups most at risk within the populations affected by an emergency. Children and adolescents are in need of care and protection that they are not able to provide for themselves, as a result of which they are likely to suffer long-term effects if their physical and developmental needs are not met:

Few threats to a minor’s well-being and long-term development equal that of being involuntarily separated from his or her parents and family. Immediate care and protection is needed, with consideration for the minor’s long-term prospects.⁶

On their arrival, what kind of problems can they face?

It has been noted that although not all unaccompanied minors have experienced extreme traumatic situations or traumatic bereavement, many of them have been forced to enter prematurely into independent life without, by definition, the family and community supports usually available to them:

In psychological terms, all experience loss to a greater or lesser degree, loss not only of family and friends but also of a defined identity, of a belonging; all experience culture shock and post-migratory stressors associated with new language, different lifestyles and customs.\(^7\)

Other common problems with which unaccompanied minors are forced to cope include racism and associated hostility, the risks of marginalisation, and insecurity and anxiety within the asylum process. Rylands\(^8\) notes that it is extremely important to be concerned with the psychological health of unaccompanied minors, especially given the evidence from our own culture of the risks associated with the lack of parental structures to guide and support young people. She outlines the two main ways in which unaccompanied minors may be particularly vulnerable:

- In their external world (i.e. emotions and thoughts), they can be at risk of exploitation or negative influence
- In their internal world, they are at risk of being overwhelmed by anxiety and by loss

Culture shock can pose a big problem for unaccompanied minors. It is the term used to describe the disorientation and distress that people feel when they are placed in unfamiliar surroundings. It can particularly affect refugees and asylum seekers whose general way of life is very different to that of the host community into which they arrive. The following are the main characteristics of culture shock:

- Strain, which stems from the effort to make adaptations to a new country
- A sense of loss and deprivation
- FEelings of exclusion and rejection
- Loss of identity

\(^7\) Taken from a presentation delivered by Dr. Jennifer Rylands, Senior Clinical Psychologist with Psychology Service for Refugees and Asylum Seekers to the Conference on the Reception of Unaccompanied Minor Asylum Seekers, Dublin, June 6th, 2001.

\(^8\) ibid
Typical reactions of unaccompanied minors who have experienced trauma and separation include depression, mood swings, increased levels of aggression and psychosomatic symptoms. Other symptoms of psychological difficulties are:

- Flashbacks, which can manifest themselves through the sensory relieving of trauma, nightmares, and intrusive thoughts
- Hyper arousal, which can result in sleeping difficulties, irritability, aggressiveness and concentration problems
- Physical symptoms, such as fatigue, stomach pains, cardiac symptoms, headaches, and muscular and joint problems
- Anxiety reactions that include suspicion, panic attacks, and fear of open space
- Sadness, which may result in depressed moods, withdrawal, loss of appetite, and suicidal thoughts
- Avoidance of any situations that remind the victim of traumatic experiences, emotional or body numbness, and phobias.\(^9\)

Information on some of the cultural differences that may exist between Irish people and non-nationals can be found in Eimear Burke's Customs Clearance, which is published by the European Cultural Foundation.

In a report published by the Irish Refugee Council in 1999\(^10\), a group of unaccompanied minors discussed some of the problems that they had encountered since arriving in Ireland. Among the issues that arose was racism, with some respondents stating that they had experienced racist verbal abuse since their arrival in the country. The minors also expressed confusion about their entitlements and about the role of the various bodies and organisations with which they had been in contact. They felt that it was unnecessarily difficult to access education, but all believed that education was essential and that they required extra support in this area. Most of them did not practise any sport or participate in any leisure activities provided by schools: they stated that the main obstacles to their integration were a lack of information and language difficulties.

Among the positive aspects of their life in Ireland that were listed by the unaccompanied minors were the invaluable support they have received from individuals and some social workers and the support that those who were attending school had received from schools and teachers.

A study carried out in 2001\(^{11}\), which was based on interviews held with 28 unaccompanied minors, noted some of the post-migratory problems to which minors are particularly susceptible. These include fears of being sent home, separation from their families and worries about their families, boredom, loneliness, and poverty. Among other findings, the study highlighted how some minors had restricted access to emotional support and advice as a result of their situation. It was suggested that activities such as attending church, going to school and using sports facilities could facilitate social integration and the development of support networks, which would address some of the main stressors that can affect minors. In addition, it was recommended that a register of volunteer families who could befriend and support unaccompanied minors be developed. As Rylands\(^{12}\) points out, attempts must be made to help minors with ordinary, normal psychosocial needs in order to ensure that normal needs are not pathologised and vulnerabilities are not over-emphasised.

THE ASYLUM APPLICATION PROCEDURE

Relevant persons/bodies involved in the asylum application process include:\textsuperscript{13}:

\textbf{Immigration officers}
Immigration officers are involved in the application process insofar as if a child under 18 years of age arrives at the frontiers of the state and is not in someone’s custody, the officer completes a referral form to the appropriate health board and informs the health board as soon as is practicable.

\textbf{Health boards}
Since 20 November, 2000, applications for asylum have been made on behalf of the unaccompanied minor by a social worker. The health boards are responsible for determining whether an application for refugee status should be made. In addition, they are responsible for the provision of social services and for meeting the accommodation, medical, and financial needs of minors.

\textbf{Office of the Refugee Applications Commissioner (RAC)}
If a person seeking asylum appears at the Office of the RAC and seems to be a minor, according to the terms of the 1996 Refugee Act, a referral form to the health board is completed and the board is informed as soon as is practicable. In the interim period, the social worker who is on duty in the Office of the RAC is contacted. Staff of the RAC do not take any further action, pending a decision by the health board to make an application on the minor’s behalf. If an application is received on behalf of the minor from the health board representative, the normal processing procedure continues.

The Office of the Refugee Applications Commissioner is currently drawing up guidelines on the processing of asylum claims from unaccompanied minors.

\textbf{Refugee Appeals Tribunal (RAT)}
If the unaccompanied minor receives a negative decision after his/her first hearing, s/he may appeal to the RAT. The consideration of appeals made by minors is prioritised, and the RAT may either confirm or overrule the initial recommendation.

Refugee Legal Service
The Refugee Legal Service (RLS) was established in 1999 to provide low-cost legal advice and representation to all asylum seekers. The RLS is funded by the Legal Aid Board and has offices in Dublin, Cork and Galway. In the Dublin office, there are particular caseworkers and solicitors who have been trained in issues surrounding unaccompanied minors. Further information is provided in Section 6.

Minister for Justice, Equality and Law Reform
If a positive recommendation has been made about the application, the Minister must grant refugee status to the application. The Minister may refuse refugee status if a negative recommendation has been received. If the Minister refuses to give a declaration, the applicant will be given 15 working days to make recommendations as to why s/he should be allowed to remain in the State. Leave to remain is granted solely at the Minister’s discretion.

Procedures involved in determining asylum applications made by unaccompanied minors:

Initial interview
If an officer of the health board decides that an application for asylum should be made on behalf of the unaccompanied minor, s/he completes an initial application form which is faxed to the RAC. An appointment is then arranged for an initial interview. The interview is attended by the unaccompanied minor, the health board representative, and an official from the RAC. The unaccompanied minor and his/her representative are advised of their right to consult a solicitor and the UNHCR, following the interview. A photograph is taken of the applicant and if s/he is over 14 years of age, his/her fingerprints are taken.

14 Taken from "First Stage Consideration of Applications for a Declaration by Unaccompanied Minors," <http://www.uvi.fi/cfproj/polmatersix.html>
The unaccompanied minor receives a questionnaire which must be completed and returned by a date and time specified by the RAC, which is generally about 7 days after issue. If the questionnaire is not returned by the specified date, s/he may be seen as deliberately obstructing the investigation of the application, with the result that the application could be deemed to be manifestly unfounded. When the unaccompanied minor and his/her representative returns the questionnaire, s/he is issued with a Temporary Residence Certificate. This contains his/her personal details and photograph.

Legal representation

All asylum seekers have the right to be represented by a legal representative during the asylum procedure. The RLS provides low-cost legal representation, in addition to which applicants may access private legal representation if they are in a position to pay for the services of a private solicitor.

Dublin Convention

The applicant may be issued with a notice in writing that his/her application may be examined under the Dublin Convention. The Convention, which came into force on 1 September, 1997, is a mechanism that is used to determine which EU Member State is responsible for examining a particular application for refugee status. Any applicants who (a) have lodged, or had an asylum application examined, in another Convention country, or (b) have entered the EU through another Convention country, or (c) have a valid residence permit or visa for another Convention country may have their applications transferred to the country in question.

If the unaccompanied minor wishes to make an appeal against a decision made under the Convention, s/he or his/her representative must do so within 5 working days of the issue of the notice. In some cases, an unaccompanied minor may be required to participate in a separate interview that specifically relates to the consideration of an application under the Dublin Convention. S/he should be accompanied by his/her representative to any such interview.
Substantive Interview
Following the return of the completed questionnaire to the RAC, and if the terms of the Dublin Convention do not apply to the application, a substantive interview is organised for the applicant. The unaccompanied minor and his/her representative are notified in writing of the time, date and place to attend for interview. The letter issued to unaccompanied minors differs from the letter that is generally issued to asylum seekers, in that it informs the minor that s/he must be accompanied by a health board officer or representative for the interview.

The interview aims to establish the full details of the claim for asylum. It is carried out by an authorised officer who has been specifically trained to interview unaccompanied minors. The interviewer keeps a written record of the interview, which is presented to the unaccompanied minor and the representative to allow them to review it. If they believe that something has not been recorded accurately, they are given the opportunity to have it rectified. The minor and his/her representative are asked to sign each page to confirm that it is an accurate account of the interview. Each page is also signed by the interviewer. If the minor cannot sign the record, the representative should sign on his/her behalf. Written and oral records are taken into account when the application is being assessed, as are any representations made by the UNHCR in connection with the application.15

Manifestly unfounded applications
The Refugee Act 1996 (as amended) sets out 12 grounds on which a claim for asylum can be held to be manifestly unfounded. An application may be deemed to be manifestly unfounded if it is decided that the applicant has no grounds to fear persecution in his/her country, or if it is judged to be a deliberate misrepresentation of the applicant’s status or an abuse of asylum procedures. If this conclusion is reached prior to the substantive interview, the unaccompanied minor and his/her representative are notified in writing and requested to attend for an interview at a specified date, time and place.

15 For more information as to the procedure in practice, see Asylum in Ireland – A Report on the Fairness and Sustainability of Asylum Determinations at First Instance, 2000, Dublin: Irish Refugee Council.
If the decision is reached following the substantive interview, the unaccompanied minor and his/her representative are sent a copy of the recommendation and the reasons for it. A copy is also sent to the solicitor (if known) and to the UNHCR.

Non-attendance of unaccompanied minor at his/her interview
Under the terms of Section 11(9) of the 1996 Refugee Act (as amended), any asylum applicant who does not turn up for an interview with an authorised officer will be notified in writing by the Refugee Applications Commissioner of an alternative interview, to be held at a specified time and place. The applicant will also be informed in the letter that if s/he does not attend the alternative interview without reasonable cause, the Commissioner will make a recommendation that s/he should not be declared to be a refugee. The applicant’s representative is also notified about the developments.

The role of the health boards
Under the provisions of the 1991 Child Care Act, every health board is required to promote the welfare of children in its area who are not receiving adequate care and protection. As a result, they have a statutory obligation to address the needs of unaccompanied minors in relation to accommodation, medical and social needs, and access to education. Health boards are also responsible for making applications for asylum on behalf of the unaccompanied minors.

The health boards’ main responsibilities in this area are:
(a) Making the decision as to whether it is in the best interests of the child to make an application for asylum;
(b) If they decide to do so, to support the child throughout the asylum process; and
(c) To provide for the immediate and ongoing needs and welfare of the child through appropriate placement and links with health, psychological and social services.

To date, most of the referrals to the health board that have been made by the Immigration Authorities or by the office of the Refugee Application Commissioner were made to the East Coast Area Health Board.
Procedures within the health board
Every young person is seen on the day of referral by a caseworker or a social worker, who carries out an immediate needs assessment that covers topics such as diet and accommodation. The social worker’s first priority is to establish if the minor has family members who are already in the country. If so, steps are taken at once to facilitate reunification. If the minor is alone, s/he is placed in appropriate accommodation. Further services provided by the health board are outlined below.

ENTITLEMENTS OF UNACCOMPANIED MINORS

Accommodation

Unaccompanied minors may be placed in any of the following: foster care, hostels, residential units, B&Bs, or hotels. Any placements of unaccompanied minors made by the health boards are decided according to the age and needs of the individual. In the case of unaccompanied minors aged up to 12 years, attempts are made to place them with foster parents. Older teenagers may be placed with a foster carer or in supported lodging. At present, there is no residential unit specifically designed for unaccompanied minor asylum seekers, with the result that some are instead housed in existing residential units. One example of such accommodation is Sutton Castle in Dublin, which is dedicated solely to unaccompanied minors. Two residential homes for unaccompanied minors are being established in early 2002, one of which will be for emergency accommodation and the other which will be a group home that provides medium to long-term care.

Minors may also be housed in B&Bs or hostels that are occupied by adult asylum seekers. Various levels of support are available in these venues, ranging from the availability of cooking facilities for self-catering to the provision of 3 meals per day. Several unaccompanied minors have applied to live with families that they have established connections with. Each of these cases has been assessed on an individual basis by the health boards before any decisions have been reached. The health boards do not support asylum seekers under 18 who live in private rented accommodation, except in very exceptional circumstances.

To date, the policy of dispersing asylum seekers to locations outside Dublin has not been applied to unaccompanied minors. The small number who do apply for asylum at a point of arrival outside Dublin are looked after by the relevant health board in the area.

Information compiled from correspondence with social workers from the Unaccompanied Minors’ Social Work Team, community welfare officers from the ERHA, and further sources as referenced.
SECTION 5 ENTITLEMENTS OF UNACCOMPANIED MINORS

Income support
Unaccompanied minors receive either direct provision or supplementary welfare allowance, depending on where they are living. To date, those who are living in Sutton Castle receive direct provision, which comprises 3 meals a day and an allowance of £15 a week. It is envisaged that this model of support will become more common in the future. Unaccompanied minors living in B&B or hostel accommodation where meals are not provided receive a supplementary welfare allowance of £84 a week, to cover expenses for food, clothing, travel, etc.

Unaccompanied minors in full-time education are entitled to receive Child Benefit. In addition, they may be entitled to such benefits as travel subsidies and the Back-to-School Clothing and Footwear Allowance. Their eligibility for these benefits is decided on the basis of individual needs assessments, which are carried out by Community Welfare Officers.

Medical services
All unaccompanied minors are entitled to free access to medical care and free medication, should they require it. They are issued with a medical card application form by their caseworker or social worker and, if required, given assistance with filling it in. They are then assigned to a GP in the area where they are staying, who completes the form. The medical card will usually arrive within three to four weeks of the form being submitted.

Voluntary health screening is available for all asylum seekers. People who are over 16 years of age are legally able to give their consent for medical screening, should they wish to avail of the service. In the case of unaccompanied minors who are under age 16 and who request or require screening, the health board must apply to the court to gain permission for the screening to take place. Testing for TB and Hepatitis B is offered to all asylum applicants, but is not compulsory. At present, unaccompanied minors are referred to the existing Area Medical Officer Service if necessary, but it has been proposed that a separate service be established to deal solely with minors.
SECTION 5 ENTITLEMENTS OF UNACCOMPANIED MINORS

There are no specific services for pregnant unaccompanied minors or young mothers who are under age 18. They are referred to existing services by the social work team, in addition to which their individual accommodation needs are assessed and they are assigned a specific social worker. If they are thought to be in need of additional support, they can be referred to public health nurses and family support workers.

Psychology service
Unaccompanied minors in need of counselling and psychological services may be referred to the Psychology Service for Refugees and Asylum Seekers, which comes under the aegis of the Northern Area Health Board. It was initially established in response to the anticipated needs of Bosnian programme refugees, but its remit has since been extended to cover referrals of refugees and asylum seekers made by the Northern, East Coast and South-Western Health Boards.

Among the services provided by the Psychology Service are a counselling and clinical psychology service and therapy and counselling for refugees and asylum seekers. One post has been specifically designated to provide services for unaccompanied minors. Referrals to the service come from a wide variety of sources, including social workers, non-governmental organisations, GPs, and self-referrals. The Psychology Service also maintains close contact with the statutory social work team for unaccompanied minors and with relevant voluntary organisations. Contact details are provided in Section 6.

Counselling for survivors of torture, a psychosocial outreach support service, advocacy and practical support for survivors of torture (including unaccompanied minors) are also available at the Spiritan Asylum Services Initiative (SPIRASI). See Section 6 for details.

Education
As is the case for Irish children, unaccompanied minors are entitled to attend primary and post-primary schools up to age 18. Applications for enrolment in schools can be made by the minors themselves, by project workers, or by third parties.
Since January 2000, additional temporary teachers have been sanctioned for all primary schools with more than 15 non-English speaking non-nationals. This entitlement is available for a period up to 2 years. Schools with 3 or less non-national pupils must meet any additional costs incurred from their own resources. An annual grant of £5,000 for the recruitment of part-time teachers is paid to schools with 4-9 non-national students. Schools with an enrolment of 10-14 non-national students receive an annual grant of £7,500, while a £200 start-up grant is available to schools that appoint a full-time teacher. Similar provisions are made in post-primary schools, but resources are allocated on the basis of 1 1/2 hour’s teaching per student per week. In addition, every non-national student is entitled to language assistance for a period of 2 years\(^{17}\).

According to a letter dated 27 September, 2001 concerning third-country nationals’ access to PLCs, VTOS and Youthreach programmes\(^{18}\), anyone who applied for asylum in the State after 26 July 1999, is not eligible for free PLC tuition. Exceptions are made in the case of asylum seekers who have been granted ‘leave to remain’ or who are the parents of an Irish-born child. Asylum seekers who entered the country before 26 July 1999, who have been waiting at least a year for a determination of their case and who are in possession of the notice of their right to work from the Department of Justice, Equality and Law Reform are entitled to free tuition on PLC courses. For other asylum seekers, including unaccompanied minors, the annual fee for the courses is £2,877. Those who pay it should be self-supporting and have approval to remain in the State.

Unaccompanied minors aged between 15 and 18 who have not completed upper secondary education and whose circumstances mean that school is not a viable option for them may be eligible for admission to Youthreach. As is the case for other asylum seekers, unaccompanied minors are not entitled to receive student

ORGANISATIONS WORKING WITH UNACCOMPANIED MINORS IN IRELAND

ACCOMMODATION
Clann Housing Association
3rd Floor, 18 Dame Street, Dublin 2
Tel: 01 6775010  Email: clannh@iol.ie  Contact: Christine Dibelius

Clann Housing is a voluntary organisation (limited company with charitable status). It provides housing for refugees, conducts research, and tries to influence public policy on the housing needs of refugees. In early 2002, Clann is establishing 2 residential homes for separated asylum seeking children. 1 of the homes will be for emergency accommodation, and the other will be a group home that provides medium to long-term care. Children and young people resident in these homes will be provided with a range of supports and advice, in co-operation with other service providers.

ADVICE ON DISCRIMINATION
Equality Authority
Clonmel Place, Dublin 2
Tel: 01 4173333 Website: www.equality.ie

The Equality Authority can provide advice to people who feel that they have experienced discriminatory treatment regarding employment or vocational training. Discrimination on the basis of race (which includes nationality, colour, and ethnic or national origin) is one of the areas about which the organisation provides free legal advice.

National Consultative Committee on Racism and Interculturalism
26 Harcourt Street, Dublin 2
Tel: 01 4785777  Email: nccri@eircom.net  Website: www.nccri.com

Through its website, the NCCRI provides a mechanism that allows people to report incidents of racism. A form is available on the site http://www.nccri.com/ReportForm-P.htm that can either be emailed or posted to the organisation. The aim of the system is to build up a profile of emerging patterns of racist abuse, e.g. based on location.

Contact: Jessica Wanzenbock, Unaccompanied Minors Project Co-ordinator

The City of Dublin VEC (CDVEC) is involved in the provision of a wide range of educational services, including schools, colleges, adult literacy and community education, and Youthreach programmes. In addition, it offers language and literacy courses for asylum seekers and refugees. The CDVEC runs educational programmes that are specifically aimed at unaccompanied minors. The organisation’s Unaccompanied Minors Project is currently involved in establishing English-language programmes and after school activities for unaccompanied minors within the City of Dublin area. It also operated a summer school for minors during July and August 2001, which may be repeated in the future.

Youthreach
Co. Dublin VEC, Main Road, Tallaght, Dublin 14
Tel: 01 4515666
Contact: Research and Policy Co-ordinator

Youthreach forms part of the Co. Dublin VEC. The main services it provides are education and training. It offers the following services specifically for unaccompanied minors:

Education: In co-operation with the health boards and voluntary agencies, training and education may be provided for unaccompanied minors who are unable to access mainstream school or who may have been unable to deal with mainstream school. The education programme it provides can be adapted to meet the needs of individuals, e.g. English language classes, literacy development, liaison with schools on behalf of those who have had difficulty in accessing mainstream education.

Mental health: A professional psychological service is available for unaccompanied minors who are registered with Youthreach.
Advice on social welfare entitlements: May be provided to unaccompanied minors through personal development or life and social skills classes as part of an education programme.
