Asparagus and Lemon Risotto

posted in Savoury, Sides, Salads & Light Bites

I decided to blog this recipe this week as it is National Vegetarian Week. And because asparagus is in season. And because I love risotto. Continue reading →

Tomato Salad with Pomegranate Molasses

posted in Savoury, Sides, Salads & Light Bites

I may have already mentioned (gushed!) that I bought Sabrina Ghayour's Persiana last week. I have already made 3 recipes from it and loved each of them. I'm blogging this as it is so simple, tasty and perfect for the recent heatwave we've had. Well, 2 sunny days counts as a heatwave in Ireland, doesn't it?! Continue reading →

Harissa

posted in For The Larder, Savoury

I have already blogged this recipe as part of one of my first blog posts Harissa Chicken Ciabatta, but I've decided that it needs to be its own post as I use it so much. So apologies if I'm boring anyone by repeating myself! I recently bought Sabrina Ghayour's Persiana and I just love it! Every recipe appeals to me which is quite unusual. She uses plenty of harissa in her cooking so I think I'm going to be linking back to this post a lot. Continue reading →

Lamb and Pea Samosas

posted in Baking, Savoury, Sides, Salads & Light Bites

I recently had a craving for some good Indian food but I didn't want anything very spicy or a curry like I'd usually go for. So I was flicking through Rick Stein's India looking for inspiration and came across his recipe for lamb samosas. Bingo! Samosas are fried or baked pastry parcels with a savoury, lightly spiced filling. I had lamb mince that needed using so I decided to give them a go. Continue reading →

Eggs in Purgatory

posted in Breakfast & Brunch, Savoury

I was recently watching reruns of Nigellissima and Nigella was making this dish. I realised it was quite a while since I had made it. So I vowed to put that right and made it the following evening. Continue reading →

This recipe from is from Nigella's Kitchen. I pretty much use the original recipe without any changes but as it is not online I thought I would share it. Continue reading →
