IRELAND’S TOURIST INDUSTRY
THE HOME MARKET

THE Irish Tourist Association has emphasised continually the importance to the tourist industry of the home market, constituting, as it does, a very considerable factor in the national economy.

In these days of stress and international strife we look with confidence to strengthened and solidified support from our home holiday-makers. At least sixty per cent. of the money expended on holidays in Ireland in the past has come from the pockets of our own people and there is no reason to doubt that, in the light of new adjustments to new conditions this source of supply will continue to be prolific. Add to this the substantial annual expenditure, by our own nationals touring abroad, which will now naturally be diverted to home resorts, thus offsetting the anticipated loss of revenue from tourist traffic entering the country. These sources, together with the normal annual increase noticeable in recent years—through the growth of the holiday habit, and particularly with the enactment of "holidays with pay" measures—confirm us in the belief that Irish Tourism must and will maintain a foremost position in the industrial economy of the country.

Assured of the home market, which we value above all others, the Irish Tourist Association realises that the overseas market, though reduced, is by no means closed. New and special efforts will be directed to the attraction of accessible potential visitors from overseas and to these Ireland's advantages for Sport and peaceful holidays will make an even stronger appeal than ever.

The Irish Tourist Association has made a careful survey of Irish tourist prospects with due regard to all the drawbacks of the present situation, and without any blind optimism, scare, or similar emotions which obscure the true delineations. In the light of such careful examination, we are convinced that there is no cause for panic or pessimism.

A determination on the part of all concerned in the industry to plan and prepare for 1940 will be a big contribution towards security and continuity. Our holiday traffic has become a major industry giving widespread employment to many classes of workers, and the maintenance of this industry in a flourishing condition is a matter of national concern. Its members must follow up the exhortation of An Taoiseach in his recent broadcast to the nation that in such times of stress as we now experience, "each one should go about his ordinary work and do it a little better."

I.T.A. Annual General Meeting.

Be ready for the Annual General Meeting of the Irish Tourist Association in the Gresham Hotel, Dublin on Wednesday, 18th October at 11 o'clock. See page 11 of this number of Irish Travel for further details.
FAR pursuits in life are so conducive to the preservation of one's sanity as a good day with hounds. Politics, Finance and the daily ration of personal worries are forgotten when one's horse cocks his ears to the opening note of a hound in an Irish Woodland. Around one the faces of the riders are tensely aglow with the hope that they will soon see a brown shadow streak away from the woodside and point his mask for the far-off hills.

Variety.

Quite a number of those present are visitors from overseas. Some of them come annually, lured by Ireland's hospitality and the unsurpassed excellence of her sporting fare. Here one has no Leicestershie cut-and-holds in endless succession, no Pennsylvanian flights of timber, or Australian barbed-wire monstrosities; no, one meets an endless variety of natural obstacles. Variety is the keynote of Ireland's menu: Stone-walls, single-banks, double-banks, hedges, bog-drains, rivers and gaps ensure that the term "sameness" can never be applied to our Irish countryside.

Inexpensive.

Others of these visitors may be having their first sample of Irish sport and they will be agreeably surprised to find that, in spite of these difficult times, excellent hunting does not necessarily entail any very great expense. There are no three guinea Saturday Caps in Ireland. Indeed, the usual Cap-money collected at most Irish Meets is half-a-crown. With the more fashionable packs the Cap is accordingly higher but the maximum for non-subscribing visitors is one pound. Subscriptions for the season are as low as three pounds, with several two-days-a-week packs: of course, with the bigger establishments, annual subscriptions range up to fifty pounds. There are several private packs and an endless array of foot-hound packs where Cap-money and subscriptions do not exist or are merely optional.

Horses.

If visitors wish to purchase their hunters here... well, who has not heard of Ballsbridge Bargains? The same applies to Ireland in general. Any farmer's son will be glad to sell his horse and although it is our Irish trait to ask plenty at the outset, we are easy to deal with eventually; and if there is still some difficulty towards the conclusion of the deal, a good "luck-penny" soon overcomes it. If horses are to be hired there are numerous reputable riding schools and livery establishments in the cities and bigger provincial towns, which provide safe cross-country conveyances at very reasonable charges. If you are hunting with the smaller provincial packs a farmer's son may lend you a horse that will do your heart good. Invariably, the honorarium will...

be left entirely to yourself, and you may have a day on his raw-looking four-year-old that will be, in the long years ahead, one of life's most pleasant and cherished Irish memories. And what more pleasant memories could one wish to retain than the happiness around this quiet woodland?

"A-Hunting."

The solemn silence of the wood itself is soon disturbed by the crackle of twigs, as hounds push onwards in search of their quarry. A blackbird's noisy proclamation informs the wood-inhabitants of the advent of these dappled invaders. The cheery voice of the huntsman echoes from the very heart of the wood as he encourages his charges.

On the outskirts, horses champ their bits impatiently. Forelegs paw the ground, as though their highly-strung owners are convinced that making mud-pies is the only obvious outlet for equine energy, while awaiting the head-freedom that Tally-ho will bring. A well-bred youngster, with a red ribbon of warning tied on his tail, is prancing about restlessly as though the ground was red-hot underfoot.

A hound whispers: timorously almost. His next note is more confident. Another whimper: one can sense he is running! And then he shatters the silence in real earnest with a deep-throated note of conviction. The Huntsman's voice cheers encouragement to his charges: "Hark to Rallywood! Hark to him, my beauties!" The quiet snap of twigs gives place to a determined onslaught as hounds crash through the undergrowth, hurrying to Rallywood's assistance. A horn twangs merrily. A thought in answer to its summons a second hound speaks: A third, a fourth; soon the whole pack crash into an ecstasy of music.

Horses lose all interest in making mud-pies as they listen to the happenings in the wood. A brown shadow slips away at the upper corner: stops a moment, takes bearings, makes a decision, and acts upon it instantly. He glides deliberately past the whipper-in who stands motionless on outpost duty. This is no startled cub who would scuttle-back to cover at the sight of a horseman! He is an old campaigner who is a firm believer in making a good decision and sticking to it. He is an old hill-fox who has found safety before in his far-off refuge and he is determined to repeat the process.

The Whipper-in waits until this venerable customer is well on his way and then electrifies the countryside with a rousing Tally-ho!

That soul-stirring war-cry is like the voice of Hunting Ireland challenging all and sundry to tackle the variety of her fences: one feels some glorious exhilaration when one rushes to accept the challenge.

AN AUTUMN VISIT TO AN IRISH FARMSTEAD

DOWN ON THE FARM

Threshing and Other Things

By SEAN HEALY

My arrival in the wide, stone-cobbled farm yard was the signal for a vigorous greeting by a salvo of barks from two collies, a cocker spaniel and a touch-looking Kerry Blue.

It was Threshing Day. The large mill groaned a shrill protest as the loosened sheaves were fed into the revolving drums. Grain dust filled the air with a pungent odour and many shirt-sleeved helpers went about their tasks in a manner that, to the mere observer looked casual.

The Irish farmer usually hires a complete threshing plant for a number of days, the neighbours always rallying around to give a helping hand during the great event. On this farm, however, they hired only the actual mill, the motive power being supplied by an engine which was permanently installed in a near-by power house.

The sequence of operations is something like this. The loaders fork the sheaves to the top of the mill where the strings that bind them are cut, the loose sheaves being then fed between rollers.

We may judge what happens within by the results at the output end. Here the separated grain is collected into sacks, and the useful straw, which is pushed out steadily by an odd sort of rocker movement, is collected on forks and stacked under a shed or built into a rick.

Country Lore.

Not all my time was spent in watching this autumnal farm event. On this, my first visit to an Irish farm, I wanted to learn as much as I could. The folk I met were friendly and very willing to talk and so, for two whole weeks, I moved about, watching this and that and asking reasonably intelligent questions.

I soon realised that learning in the country is immeasurably deeper and slower than in the city. The whole idea of farming is based on a series of life processes. On the farm the mistakes of this year may take a twelve-month to rectify: in this, more than all places, one must live and learn.

In his own way and without perhaps fully realising it, the average farmer must have a working knowledge of genetics, chemistry, physiology, hygiene, carpentry, mechanics, book-keeping and economics. He must always be conscious of the fundamental law that everything taken from the land must be put back. He must have sufficient sympathy to visit his animals during the dark hours, knowing by instinct and experience exactly what they need.

An obliging farm-hand kindly lent me an overall and I quickly made a general nuisance of myself by getting in everyone's way. As if to give a special welcome to this strange creature from the city, a pretty cow with quiet, soft eyes gave birth to a pretty calf with long spindly legs and I was highly amused at his not knowing whether the first meal was at his mother's bow or stern. I tweaked his tail and told him he must live and learn.

Grass Seeds.

On my last evening at the farm, I wandered into an old unpainted barn. Standing in the corner were several wash-tubs of grass seed and I let hundreds of these tiny little grains trickle through my fingers: as my mind slipped on a season or two I could visualise the rolling acres of fresh green grass with roots gripping the earth, drawing up water and richness that the cattle and sheep might live. Farming may have its bad moments, but a farm is the one place where you can see life moving onwards in its own mysterious and natural way.

OF INTEREST TO HOTELS

Annual General Meeting :: A Library for Guests :: The Log Fire

ARRANGEMENTS are now in hand for the holding of the Annual General Meeting of the Irish Tourist Association on the 18th of October in the Gresham Hotel, Dublin, at 7.30 o’clock. Invitations to members will be issued in due course, together with railway vouchers and copies of the Agenda.

A good attendance is expected. All members of the I.T.A. are earnestly urged to come and contribute to the discussions on matters arising from the present international situation and of grave importance to the tourist industry in Ireland. Members are asked to give special consideration beforehand to such problems as affect their particular circumstances so that they may be in a position to make concrete and constructive proposals at the meeting. This would ensure its being not only a valuable clearing house for the solution of present problems and queries but also a well equipped gathering for the planning of a course of action for 1940.

The Association wants to have the active co-operation of all members, and particularly of hotels, guest houses and boarding houses, whose successful experience of previous seasons will throw much light on whatever difficulties may arise in the future.

New I.T.A. President.

Mr. Fred Moran of Moran’s Hotel, Dublin has been nominated by the Directors to be President of the Irish Tourist Association for 1939-40.

Mr. Moran has been a well-known figure in hotel circles for a long time. He was President of the Irish Tourist Association in 1925-26.

A Library for Guests.

A holiday-maker recently returned from the West of Ireland has written us to express his appreciation of the splendid little library which catered for guests staying in the hotel of his choice.

This is an age of reading and most guests on holiday have been accustomed to the service of public libraries in their home towns. On a dull day, or when one’s own reading has been used up, one likes to think that the hotel library can be called upon to furnish something suited to the mood and taste. And it is quite inexpensive for the hotelier to gather together, bit by bit, a small but varied stock of light reading—periodicals, cheap editions of well-known works, “thrillers,” etc.—upon which the guest at a loose end may draw. Our correspondent writes that many of the guests added their quota to the collection, while all of them made use of and enjoyed it.

Other such inexpensive but valuable little services which are really appreciated by holiday guests include the provision of Playing Cards (a couple of packs), and games for dull evenings, such as chess, darts and quoits.

The Log Fire.

Log fires are a prominent and very picturesque feature in many Irish hotels and visitors to this country have frequently commented upon their attractiveness. There is an old belief among many woodsmen that every colour and tint to which a tree is exposed during its life glows in the firelight when that tree burns upon the hearth. Perhaps this is why log fires of local wood become so fascinating—because the visitor can feel, even if it be sub-consciously, that he is getting all the local colour of the countryside from the fire at his comfortable chair.

Good Cooking.

While we heartily agree that good cooking is the height of sophistication, that it is an art and should be studied and approached with the fervour and enthusiasm of an artist we cannot forget that the first and chief class of foods are milk, eggs, fruit and green vegetables—all of which Ireland is fortunate to possess in luxuriant abundance.

“IT WAS NEWS TO ME,” written by Charles J. O’Malley and published (at $2.50) by Bruce Humphries of Boston, opens with an account of Ireland in the post-famine years. The author tells how, shortly after his sixteenth birthday, he left Ireland for America and there are many pages retelling his adventures in the U.S. and his subsequent travels in foreign lands.

THE IRISH RED CROSS.

An Irish Red Cross Society (Cumann Croise Deirge na hEireann) similar to the National Red Cross Societies of other countries has been established. It is an autonomous body with powers to accept the affiliation of bodies engaged in similar humanitarian work and the President of Ireland, Dr. Douglas Hyde, is President of the Society. The objects are threefold—to furnish voluntary aid to sick and wounded of armies in time of war: to furnish relief to prisoners of war: in time of peace or war to carry on and assist in work for the improvement of health, the prevention of disease and the mitigation of suffering throughout the world.

The Society is an organisation of voluntary workers and is entirely dependent on voluntary subscription. Funds are urgently needed and may be addressed to any member of the Central Council or to the Chairman (C. J. MacAuley, M.B., Vice-Chairman (Hon. W. E. Wylie) or the Hon. Treasurer (Mrs. E. Ceann) at 20 Merrion Square, Dublin.
