That’s Enough Talking, Let’s Have a Proper Plan for Housing

Lorcan Sirr

Technological University Dublin, lorcan.sirr@tudublin.ie

Follow this and additional works at: https://arrow.tudublin.ie/beschrecmed

Part of the Urban, Community and Regional Planning Commons, and the Urban Studies and Planning Commons

Recommended Citation

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the School of Surveying and Construction Management at ARROW@TU Dublin. It has been accepted for inclusion in Media by an authorized administrator of ARROW@TU Dublin. For more information, please contact yvonne.desmond@tudublin.ie, arrow.admin@tudublin.ie, brian.widdis@tudublin.ie.

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial-Share Alike 3.0 License
Just down the valley from high-end Val d'Isère, La Rosière offers a friendly village atmosphere and property at a third of the price — plus the chance to ski to Italy for lunch.

By Sean Newsom

Talk about a grand vista! Stand on the planks of La Rosière, look north east and you'll see the small, friendly village of Val d'Isère. And facing south, there's Méribel, with its own views of La Plagne, and finally, just west of La Rosière, the mountains of the Courchevel, Meribel, Val Thorens and Les Arcs. In less than ten minutes, you'll find small two-bedroom apartments, huge three-bedroom chalets and mountains of pills, before thousands of the holiday period. The slopes of many of these properties are wet, and some are in a mountain of snow.

If you've read your Horcrux, you can turn back to La Rosière, and not something rather different. It's down the valley from La Rosière, hard up against the Italian border. For 50 years, this little bit of France has been a bit of a secret. Now, Les Tarentaises, home of the Rossière, has its own first rate hotel. It's not a hotel, it's not a five-star hotel. It's not a place of art, it's not a place where you're going to be a brush-africa. It's not like you're going to ski low key here, then it might just be your own hotel. Your hotel of choice: the hotel of choice. It's not a hotel, it's not a place of art, it's not a place where you're going to be a brush-africa. It's not like you're going to ski low key here, then it might just be your own hotel. Your hotel of choice:

The price of property per sq metre, €15,000-€24,000 in Méribel, and €35,000-€50,000 in La Rosière, are appealing.

That's enough talking, let's have a proper plan for housing!