Tenants get more certainty at last

LINDA DAILY
MARKET WATCH

Housing measures are finally here. Alan Kelly, the minister for housing, has announced a list of measures to address ongoing problems in the private rental sector. The list includes measures to address rent pressure zones, introduction of tenancy bonds, a national rent register and a no-deposit zone. The measures are designed to provide greater certainty for tenants and landlords. The measures are expected to come into force in the coming months.

A breakdown of the measures:

1. Introduction of tenantry bonds
2. National rent register
3. No deposit zones
4. Rent pressure zones
5. Landlord licensing

These measures are expected to provide greater certainty for tenants and landlords. The minister said that these measures are a significant step forward in addressing the issues facing the private rental sector.
