Eroding Planning Powers Leaves us at the Mercy of the Market

Lorcan Sirr

Technological University Dublin, lorcan.sirr@tudublin.ie

Follow this and additional works at: https://arrow.tudublin.ie/beschrecmed

Part of the Urban, Community and Regional Planning Commons, and the Urban Studies and Planning Commons

Recommended Citation

Sirr, L (2016) Eroding planning powers leaves us at the mercy of the market. The Sunday Times

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial-Share Alike 3.0 License
I love it. It gives me a chance to work with young designers, and that's what I really enjoy doing. Designing gardens requires a lot of money and a lot of care. It was a place in which I could work with nature and create a haven for the birds and butterflies.

De Courcy's garden, which she admits has "gone a bit wild", is a sanctuary for our bees. It's an area where we can support the biodiversity of the local ecosystem. De Courcy says: "To say the least, the things that we do to support the bees."