
Media

DIT Grangegorman

2015-01-20

Where Does This Leave the South East?

Irish Independent newspaper

Follow this and additional works at: <https://arrow.tudublin.ie/ggmed>

Recommended Citation

Irish Independent newspaper 20/01/2015. "Where does this leave the South East?".

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the DIT Grangegorman at ARROW@TU Dublin. It has been accepted for inclusion in Media by an authorized administrator of ARROW@TU Dublin. For more information, please contact yvonne.desmond@tudublin.ie, arrow.admin@tudublin.ie, brian.widdis@tudublin.ie.

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial-Share Alike 3.0 License

Friday 24 July 2015

News Education

FOLLOW CONTACT

Where does this leave the South East?

PUBLISHED 20/01/2015 | 02:30

SHARE

A FOURTH university in Dublin, with a fifth only 25 kilometres away in Maynooth, will be a game changer.

Statins Alert

The Real Truth About The Risks Of Cholesterol-Lowering Statins
thecholesteroltruth.com/Statins

Irish Genealogy Records

Trace Your Irish Ancestry in 1+ Billion Records. 30 Day Trial.
genealogybank.com/IrishGenealogy

Ads by Google

It will mean that over half the country's universities will be located in the Dublin region - with far-reaching effects for already unbalanced regional development.

Not alone will the newcomer transform the Grangegorman area of the capital, it will offer serious competition.

The second technological university (TU) should follow a few years later, arising from an amalgamation of the Cork and Tralee institutes of technology. So where does this leave the South East, which has long maintained that the absence of a university is a reason for the region's decline and its failure to attract sufficient badly needed investment?

Minister Brendan Howlin and his former Cabinet colleague Phil Hogan put Waterford and Carlow institutes of technology under strong pressure to agree to merge and come up with a viable joint TU plan. So far, they have singularly failed to do so, and relations between the two are strained, to say the least.

Education Minister Jan O'Sullivan has appointed Michael Kelly, former chair of the Higher Education Authority, to knock heads together. She has also appointed Dick Langford to chair the Waterford Institute governing body. He's the original 'cooler', guaranteed to calm the heated passions and arguments that have been raging in Waterford IT.

If the two institutes can't get their act together it's back to the drawing board for policy makers.

But, for Waterford, failure to agree a plan would be a further serious setback to a campaign for a university which began in the 1840s.

Most Read | Most Shared | Most Commented

Lack of housing for Galway students 'worst it's ever been'
Education

Private schools: Pupil numbers and day fees Education

Irish teachers 'among best paid in the world' - OECD Education

High-powered panel to review gender equality in education Education

Thousands of families to get 'back to school' allowance Education

Feedback

Promoted articles

 20 Proven Health Benefits of Coconut Oil (#5 is Best)
Daily Spikes

These Beautiful Women From

Some people are holding out for an upgrading of the institute to university status. But a simple rebranding as a university would spark off demands elsewhere.

There are too many memories of the consequences of upgrading the Regional Technical College in Waterford in 1997 to institute of technology status, which prompted similar demands from other regional colleges, all of which were eventually upgraded.

There is a determination to avoid a repetition of the decision taken by John Major's administration which effectively upgraded UK polytechnics to universities.

What the government wants is a strong technological sector complementing the traditional universities. It wants co-operation between them in 'clusters' to avoid unnecessary duplication of courses. But nobody can predict how things will finish up.

The worst fear is of a three-tiered system with the traditional universities on top, technological universities in the middle and the remaining institutes at the bottom in terms of their standing among students and employers.

John Walshe was special advisor to former Education Minister Ruairi Quinn

Irish Independent

Promoted Articles

9 Types Of Clothing That Are Irresistible To Men Everywhere

boredomly

A West London Victorian terrace is totally transformed

Houzz

The World's Most Beautiful News Anchors

UnMotivating

The 15 Most Beautiful Celebrity Wedding Dresses Of All Time

stylerange

This House Was Built Out of 14 Shipping Containers

Dwell

The 9 Most Gorgeous Cheerleaders In Sports

boredpenguin

JEALOUS !!! 17 Celebrities Who Have Barely Aged !

Entertain Me

The 9 Most Gorgeous Presenters On Television

metalikes

10 Awkward Ways The Queen Is Mad With Kate Middleton

LOLWOT

Recommended by Outbrain

Around The Globe will Shatter your...

Entertain Me

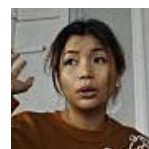

An illusion mirror is all it takes to completely transform a sad...

Houzz

Prefab Home That Can Be Built in a Day Generates Twice the...

Dwell

Tycoon arrested over attack on Cambodia TV star

Independent.ie

Heartbreak for Imelda May as she tells of decision to split from...

Independent.ie

Recommended by Outbrain

Editor's Choice

Friday Interview: Frank Burt - 'He was ahead of his time, sports psychologist'

Hero of '75 league-winning...

Ten things off the beaten track tourists will love about Dublin

A 'two-month tourist' gives he guide

Boss's abolition joke may turn out to be a remarkably accurate prediction

John Mulligan on Irish...

