

Local religious tourism and the volunteers within related entities

Oliver Cassar

This quantitative and qualitative research covers, on a small scale, the topic of local religious tourism and the volunteers working within the related organisations. It discusses the local habits compared with apparent intrusion of local privacy by tourists visiting small communities. On the other hand, there is an economic impact on the local community and the development of tourism may be having a positive influence on individuals to further their spiritual development.