Soft skills development in hospitality, tourism and event management education

DT Denise O’Leary & Dr Ziene Motti
Dublin Institute of Technology
ATLAS 2018 COPENHAGEN

Sectoral Context
Changes in the sector leading to changing skills need: ‘The main skills gaps and shortages reported by employers relate to soft skills, language skills, interpersonal skills and ICT skills rather than tourism-specific skills’ (European Commission, 2016)

Changing Educational Context
- Transformative learning
- “Modifying perspectives, attitudes and behaviours so that graduates are more open, inclusive and capable of confronting industry dilemmas” (Stone and Duffy 2015)

Changing Education Context
Integration of soft competencies into a curriculum helps graduates obtain and maintain career positions (Mitchell et al. 2010)
What are hard and soft skills?

- Hard skills
  - Technical and/or cognitive knowledge

- Soft skills
  - Interpersonal/people/behavioural skills (Weber et al., 2013)
  - Personal behavioural attributes, values, or traits, including ethics, communication, leadership, interpersonal, and teamwork skills (Sisson et al., 2013)
  - Ethical, flexible, tolerant, amiable, and responsible (Kim et al. 2010)

Soft skills are often described as interpersonal skills like communication and teamwork. Hard skills can be described as disciplinary knowledge and technical skills.

Which soft skills are more important?

- Debate in the literature
- Differences between different cohorts
- Relative importance of different skills (e.g., Jiang & Alexakis, 2017)
- How well equipped graduates are for employment

The Association of American Colleges and Universities found that students thought they were far better equipped for jobs than employers did.
