1, 300 graduates including students of The School of Culinary Arts & Food Technology were recently conferred in the magnificent surroundings of St. Patricks Cathedral. Professor David Fitzpatrick, President TU Dublin (photo below) congratulated graduates highlighting the significant role which TU Dublin (as Ireland’s first Technological University) will play towards creating a sustainable future for the citizens of the world. Graduates are already playing important roles in technical and scientific innovation, in economic and social development and in the cultural and academic life of Ireland and internationally. TU Dublin’s strategic focus towards 2030 will closely follow the UN Charter for Sustainability. Professor Fitzpatrick also reminded graduates that they were now members of the Graduate Network.

Thank you!!
The School of Culinary Arts and Food Technology congratulates Dr David Irwin recently appointed Head of School of Languages, Law & Social Sciences, David was previously Head of Department of Humanities in Tallaght IT. Our school were also delighted to welcome back Fabiola Hand (photo below) to our school office team and to thank Alan Montgomery (who has moved to TU Dublin International Office) for his excellent work. It is with great sadness that our school remembers past colleagues and current students who passed away recently, including our retired colleague Paddy Smith, lecturer in Restaurant Service in Cathal Brugha Street for many years. School student Julie Crowe - DT405.2 Culinary Science (photo below) passed away tragically on Nov 4th, beloved daughter of Gary and Anna and cherished sister of Thomas, Rachel and Sophie. Julie’s fellow students lecturers and staff from TU Dublin City Campus, Cathal Brugha Street joined the Requiem Mass held at the Church of the Holy Trinity, Ratoath. Julie’s family set up an email address if you wish to send a photo or share a memory of Julie. The email address is: injuliesmemory@gmail.com, Julie’s month’s mind mass will be Sunday December 15th at 12.15pm in the Church of the Holy Trinity, Ratoath, her family welcomes you to attend. May Julie Rest in Peace, “ Gay Byrne, Famous RTE Television & Radio Broadcaster (photo below) died 4.11.19 great supporter of Irish foods and culinary education. Gay helped to showcase many of Ireland’s culinary talents over the years and with his wife Kathleen our school had the pleasure of entertaining them both within our training restaurants over the years. Gary (Gaz) Regan - in appreciation [source: thespiritbusiness.com]

Gary ‘Gaz’ Regan (photo above right ) died on Friday 15 November at Newburgh Hospital in New York, Born in the town of Rochdale, England, Regan worked at his parents’ pub the Prince Rupert in Bolton, despite being underage, and trained as a chef at the Courtfield Catering College in Blackpool. After discovering a love of writing, Regan penned a drinks column for Food Arts in the early 1990s. He also wrote for Wine Enthusiast, Cheers and Malt Advocate, and was most known for his column, The Cocktailian, in the San Francisco Chronicle. During his lifetime, Regan wrote 18 books on drinks, bartending, and cocktails including The Joy of Mixology (multiple editions), The Bartender’s Gin Compendium, The Negroni: A Gaz Regan Notion, and the annual 101 Best New Cocktails. After developing tongue cancer in 2003, Regan started to wear eyeliner under one of his eyes “to remind bartenders that eye contact with customers is vital”. He also created Regan’s Orange Bitters No. 6, and worked with spirits companies on cocktail competitions, as well as brand sponsorships and promotions. In October 2018, Regan launched the Worldwide Bartender Database, an online portal for bartenders and spirits producers devoted “to all matters across the bar”. In addition, Regan received the Lifetime Achievement Award during Tales of the Cocktails’ Spirited Awards in 2012, along with a number of accolades for his writing. Regan is survived by his wife of 11 years, Amy Gallagher, and cousin, Ken Armstrong. RIP Gary Regan.
Dr Colin Hunt Receives TU Dublin’s 1st Honorary Doctorate

Dr Colin Hunt, CEO—AIB, became the first person to receive an honorary doctorate from TU Dublin. Dr Hunt was Chair of the Higher Education Strategy Group which in 2011 delivered the National Strategy for Higher Education to 2030. The Hunt Report highlighted the international success of Technological Universities and was the first to propose the development of Technological Universities in Ireland leading to the passing of the 2018 Technological Universities Act and the establishment of TU Dublin earlier this year. Dr Hunt is known as a challenging and strategic economic thinker who advised Finance Ministers, Transport Ministers and Education Ministers in various governments. He also developed a successful business career during which he worked with stockbrokers, influenced airlines, and managed bankers. He is now Chief Executive Officer of AIB, where he leads a staff of over 10,000. In recognition of his many achievements, and specifically for his leadership role in initiating the concept of Technological Universities in Ireland, as the first such University, TU Dublin was proud to confer on him the award of Doctor of Philosophy.

Re-Claimed Uniforms - School Fundraising Initiative

Students and staff worked together towards on ‘re-claimed school uniforms initiative’ again this semester, which offered new and existing students the option of purchasing a re-claimed school uniform at one third of its original cost. This is the second year of this school fundraising initiative. At the request of Dr Frank Cullen (Head of School) this years proceeds (amounting to over €300) were kindly donated to the college hardship fund (which is managed by Mr. Finbarr O’Leary - College Chaplain, (photo right), Finbarr thanked our school for the donation stating that these moneys are really making a difference to college students.

Importance of Accessible and Current Reading Lists

On foot of Professor Brian Bowe’s extremely informative report given to Academic Board on the above topic, Richard Barrett (Librarian, TU Dublin, City Campus, Cathal Brugha Street and Grangegorman) reminded colleagues to bear in mind the importance of placing accessible and current reading lists on all modules. More specifically, Instead of contacting academic staff each year, Richard stated that library services would like to be able to use the Programme and Module Catalogue as a one stop shop to go to get the most up to date reading lists for modules. If the new reading lists were put up (and updated each year as needed), Richard adds that they could rely on their accuracy when purchasing new books for the library.
School Awards Day

The School of Culinary Arts and Food Technology held their annual awards ceremony recently, this prestigious event which recognises the achievements of the school’s students and staff across the culinary, gastronomy, bakery and pastry arts, bar and beverage management, cookery, food product development and RE-INSPIRED fields of study and professional practice during 2019. The event took place in the Kathleen O’Sullivan theatre, Cathal Brugha Street, Dublin and brought together all the major industry trade bodies, Inspired Friends of Culinary Arts—School Supporters, recipients of awards and diplomas and their families. A special presentation was made to Freshways Food Company—Diarmuid Shanahan (Co-owner & Managing Director) for their investment towards assisting student learning in the school (middle photo below). Dr Frank Cullen (Head of School Culinary Arts and Food Technology) congratulated all award winners on their achievements and thanked all the major trade industry bodies and foodservice companies for their continued sponsorship and support to the school. A special word of thanks was also offered to Tony Campbell, James Sheridan, Warren McElhone, Lynsey White, Ann Walsh and the school laboratory assistant team for organising lunch in the school’s Green Room Training Restaurant for guests, award winners and school sponsors and to Alan Montgomery and Geraldine Skelly (School Administrators) and Jackie Rigney (School Business Development Manager) for their hard work behind the scenes towards co-ordinating this prestigious event for our school.

TU Dublin Strategic Plan—Professor David Fitzpatrick (President, TU Dublin).

Over the last number of months we have been working towards creating a TU Dublin 2030 strategic plan. As the first Technological University in Ireland we have the challenge and opportunity to shape TU Dublin for the future to ensure it reaches its full potential. The TU Dublin 2030 process invited many stakeholders to participate in workshops and surveys to draw on our combined knowledge, perspectives and ambitions. There have been almost 2,500 inputs from staff, students, alumni, community and industry, and for that we are most grateful. The feedback from these consultation workshops and surveys can be accessed through this link. We would also like to provide an outline of the high-level strategy developed to date, which is available in this presentation. In the coming weeks, we will make public the high-level scope of the plan on our website but the strategy process continues. A significant amount of work is ongoing to tease out the detailed objectives, targets and actions for the internal version of the strategic plan, which we will deliver together. Please input to this process where you can. Thank you for joining us on this path of discovery to explore our infinite possibilities!

Dublin Gastronomic Symposium (DGS)

The Dublin Gastronomy Symposium is back and will take place on the 26-27th May 2020, the Theme will be: Food and Disruption: What shall we eat tomorrow? The concept of disruption has been central to the story of food from the dawn of time. Individual disruptors (Apicius, Columbus, La Varenne, Escoffier, Parker, Adrià), agricultural disruptors (Cato, Varro, Jethro Tull, Monsanto, GMOs), and technological disruptors (fire, flint, freezing, refrigeration, railways, electricity, internet, iPhones) have shaped how we live our lives today.

ARROW- Academic publishing and open access to research activity

TU Dublin has developed a standout facility for academic publishing and open access. Arrow is a collection of the research outputs of the university made available as open access material. This material can be used, shared and reused as long as it is not for commercial purposes and the author/authors are attributed. It is managed by TU Dublin Library Services. For those who have not used Arrow, a brief look at arrow@tudublin.ie will show the range of resources available to scholars using this resource. Yvonne Desmond, TU Dublin’s Moderator for Arrow, has been offering demonstrations and short workshops for academic staff in each site recently, these events include publishing on Arrow and using its resources effectively. A large number of our school staff have already posted their articles, works, papers, chapters from books, etc. on Arrow these are available at arrow@tudublin.ie currently our school colleagues works have been downloaded worldwide nearly 250,000 times.
School Lecturer Appears on Ray Darcy Radio

Our school were delighted that Ann Marie Dunne (Lecturer Baking & Pastry Arts, TU Dublin) was invited to appear on the RTE Ray Darcy Radio show recently. Ann Marie spoke about the world of baking with Ray and obviously her informative, interesting and engaging approach appealed to the listeners, because she was also invited to return to speak on the show again where she judged the Star Baker Donnacha O Callaghan (Former Munster & Ireland Player). Ray Darcy expressed his desire to learn some baking skills and knowledge so Ann Marie kindly suggested to him to consider spending some time with our team in CBS, City Campus, TU Dublin, Ann Marie will organise same very soon. Ann Marie also presented Ray Darcy with a copy of our school book, ‘All in the Food—celebrating 75 years of Culinary Excellence’. Her full interviews is available at https://www.rte.ie/radio/utils/share/radio1/11111767 AND https://www.rte.ie/radio/utils/share/radio1/11123589

Conference Craving Planet Earth: Food in Culture - Sibiu, Romania

In early November 2019, our colleague Anke Klitzing (Lecturer, School of Culinary Arts & Food Technology, TU Dublin) and MA Gastronomy and Food Studies graduate Elizabeth Wilson spoke at the conference Craving Planet Earth: Food in Culture Past, Present and Future held in Sibiu, Romania (photos below). Elizabeth Wilson presented on the work done for her MA thesis under the title ‘The Contribution of P.G. Wodehouse to the Field of Gastronomy’, while Anke Klitzing offered “My Palate Hung With Starlight” - A Gastrocritical Reading of Seamus Heaney’s Poetry. The conference, hosted by Lucien Blaga University of Sibiu (photo below) together with Wolverhampton University, brought together scholars from countries as varied as the UK, Switzerland, Ukraine and India, discussing food in a variety of cultural formats, such as literature, media, art and song.
Our school received a special visit from Professor Kwang II Kang (far left - photo below), from the Republic of Korea, he joined the school’s Molecular Gastronomy class for one of their training session in the schools food product development kitchen. There he met final year undergraduate students from Culinary Science, Culinary Arts and Food Innovation and asked them about the dishes that they were working on. Staff members Dr Róisín Burke and Pauline Danaher (Lecturers Culinary Arts & Food Product Development) were delighted to explain the science and culinary aspects of the recipes that were being used. Professor Kang was very impressed with the advanced techniques and knowledge demonstrated and expressed his desire and plans to introduce Molecular Gastronomy courses in his university in the Republic of Korea.

Chef Network National Student Industry Forum

The School of Culinary Arts and Food Technology were delighted to support the recent Student Industry forum organised by Chef Network in GMIT. This event brought together educators and Ireland’s future chefs with industry to showcase career and progression opportunities in Ireland. The event also assisted in promoting student-chef networking opportunities. Further details are available at info@chefnetworks.ie. Our school also worked closely with Chef Network on their recent Chocolate Masterclass held in the KOS Theatre, City Campus, TU Dublin as part of our schools on-going commitment to support further training and knowledge dissemination for all
School Lecturer Joins Editorial Board of Journal of Ethnic Foods

Senior Lecturer School of Culinary Arts & Food Technology, TU Dublin Dr. Róisín Burke was invited by the editorial board of the Journal of Ethnic Foods to make a presentation in Seoul, Republic of Korea on October 29th. She was invited to participate in ‘The 1st International Symposium - Sustainability of Ethnic Foods and Beyond’ which was part of 5th Anniversary celebrations of the Journal of Ethnic Foods. Her presentation was entitled ‘Traditional Foods Can Inspire the Creation of Novel Foods When Using Molecular Gastronomy’ and Róisín is pictured below with the members of the editorial board.

TU Dublin visit to Farmony (Ag-Tech Company)

On 22nd November, Dr Frank Cullen - Head of School, Jackie Rigney - Business Development Manager, the Campus Planning team and Andy Maguire Sustainability Co-ordinator for Strategic Development at TU Dublin visited Farmony, a new Irish based Ag-tech startup. This showcase urban farm based in Ballycoolin focuses on offering a sustainable, turn key solution to Irish (and global) producers which includes a 365 day production of hyper-local leafy greens, herbs, micro greens and many more options. From a footprint of only 55 square metres, one Farmony can generate in excess of the equivalent output of 5 acres of traditional farm land from a vertical growing surface of 80 square metres. The goal of the Farmony model is to reduce Ireland’s dependence on imports. The produce is pesticide free, and the solution uses just 5% of the water of a traditional farm, utilizing a controlled environment and hydroponic technology to grow vertically within two repurposed 40ft containers. Thanks were offered to John Paul Prior and Dan O’Brien for a very interesting and thought provoking visit.
School’s Training Restaurants in ‘Ireland’s top 100 for lunch’ (Irish Times)

It’s an institution that seemed in danger of crumbling for a while. When Lisa Cope, Marie-Claire Digby and I met to plan this list we were happily surprised by how many types of lunch we could name, which allowed a different kind of top 100 to evolve. But the good news is that lunch is alive and well. Our great lunches list will take you to unusual places: lunch at a library, college, (see below) Michelin-starred restaurant, takeaway or second-hand bookshop, among others. TU Dublin Green/Blue Room Technical University of Dublin, Cathal Brugha Street, Dublin 1, bookings on scaft@tudublin.ie. The student restaurant at the culinary school of TU Dublin is one of the city’s best lunch secrets and, at €10 for three courses (and €4 for a glass of good wine), a bargain to boot. It doesn’t really advertise, because it doesn’t need to, but each semester, lunch is served in the Blue or Green Room restaurant from Monday to Friday, cooked by first-, second- or third-year students, and the public are welcome. It’s a learning environment, but serious food has been known to come out of the immersion programmes in particular, where second or third years take over the entire running of the restaurant, deciding everything from the dishes served to the wine list. At prices like these, you can afford to take a punt on the student chefs. (Lisa Cope, Irish Times Newspaper 1.11.19). School visits Silver Hill Duck in Co. Monaghan

The recent partnership between TU Dublin and Silver Hill Duck in Co. Monaghan witnessed the first cohort of students under the co-ordination of Diarmuid Murphy (Lecturer Culinary Arts) and Jackie Rigney (School Business Development Manager) (photo below) visiting the site. From a learning perspective, the educational trip was organized to provide students with a rare opportunity that demonstrated the development, preparation and presentation of the unique distinctive hybrid duck that was developed over thirty years, bred exclusively for Silver Hill Duck. Students across multiple programmes were invited to be educated on all aspects of production from breeding, egg production, hatching and selection, to processing, cooking and packaging. In the new centre of excellence, the kitchen development team served up various duck products for the students to taste. This was followed by a question and answer session in which students got to engage with the team at Silver Hill Duck. The partnership has led to further tours, cooking demonstrations with Jason Li before Christmas and culinary competitions (March 2020) being organized. So keep an eye out for further events with our school and Silver Hill Duck will be delivering soon.
School Assists International Year of the Periodic Table Event

The School of Chemical and Pharmaceutical Sciences welcomed 70 participants, most of whom were chemistry and science teachers, to the Chem-Ed Ireland 2019 conference on Saturday, October 19th in Kevin Street. This annual event provides an opportunity to network and to share resources and ideas relevant to teaching chemistry and science in Ireland and featured presentations and workshops. Teachers travelled from across the country to participate and the theme for the day was the International Year of the Periodic Table. Colleagues James Fox and Shannon Dickson in the School of Culinary Arts & Food Technology provided the highlight of the day as they had handcrafted an edible periodic table. They were ably assisted by first-year Bar & Restaurant Management students who prepared the delicious chocolate brownie and lemon drizzle bases. The programme included a series of engaging and informative workshops on Microscale chemistry (recognised as a green and sustainable approach); Making a colorimeter and using it to analyse facewash; Safety guidance for practical chemistry school laboratories and Editing and writing Wikipedia pages about scientists from diverse backgrounds. Presentations dealt with a wide range of topics including the ‘Breaking Chemical Bias’ project, A day in the life of a chemist working in the biopharmaceutical sector, SciFest science fairs, Development of new Leaving Cert chemistry specifications and TU Dublin chemistry research in response to global challenges. Further information on the event is available at the conference website here, and tweets can be viewed using the hashtags #irishchemed19 and

SILO LONDON – One of the world’s first zero-waste restaurants

Silo is a restaurant “designed from back to front, always with the bin in mind”, where they have eliminated waste. School Lecturer Jimmy Griffin (Baking & Pastry Arts, TU Dublin –LEFT SIDE CENTRE PHOTO BELOW) was selected as one of three International judges for The Coupe Louis Lesaffre Asian Pacific region world quarterfinals was held in Shanghai, China recently at the China International Import Expo or CIIE, the Worlds biggest trade fair. Five teams competed in the event with the top four going through to the Coupe du Monde in Paris 2020. Jimmy’s fellow jury members included Bernd Keutcher, Akadamie Director, Weinheim, Germany, and Solveig Tofte of the Bread Bakers Guild of America as well as Honorary President and founder, MOF Christian Vabret. The competing teams were Korea South, Japan, China, China Taipei and Singapore and the competition consisted of three specialist bakers operating on 8 hour timeline to complete three categories/skill sets Bread, Viennoiserie and Artistic piece. Jimmy reports that the standard was exceptionally high at the event (see photos below from each category). Four teams qualified Japan, China, China Taipei and South Korea. Jimmy states that it was a huge honour to have been selected as jury for this amazing competition and represent Ireland and the school adding that having witnessed and tasted the products from all the competitors, he has no doubts that one or more of these teams will achieve a podium finish in Paris at the World Cup Final in January 2020. 1st Peer Review Paper by MA Gastronomy & Food Studies Graduate

Only a month after officially graduating, Ketty Quigley will see part of her Masters dissertation published in the Advances in Hospitality and Tourism Research (AHTR) journal. This peer-reviewed paper is a joint publication with her supervisor Margaret Connolly, and two other staff members Dr. Elaine Mahon and Dr. Máirtín Mac Con Iomaire. The paper titled ‘Insight from Insiders: A Phenomenological Study for Exploring Food Tourism Policy in Ireland 2009-2019’ is published in a special Gastronomy and Tourism issue of the AHTR and will be available by open access online in volume 7, issue 2 (2019) at http://www.ahtrjournal.org/. The paper’s findings highlight the influence that key policy makers, the formation of networks, clusters, and the role social entrepreneurs had on developing food tourism in Ireland. The influence of the economic downturn in 2008 was a force for change and creativity among both government agencies and the broader tourism and hospitality industry. Food tourism policy was aligned with broader government policy, the creation of regional tourism brands (Wild Atlantic Way etc.), linking gastronomy with cultural and other tourism initiatives and marketing strategies. Whereas food in tourism in Ireland is well established, only ten per cent of overseas visitors are travelling specifically for food experiences.

Ketty Quigley is a French native who hails from the Loire Valley and fell in love with Dublin in 2004. She worked in the travel industry for many years and in the middle of the recession, bored with her office job she started a food blog called ‘French Foodie in Dublin’ to share her passion for food and Dublin. She set up a food tourism business in 2015 called Delicious Dublin Tours. In 2017 she was part of the first cohort to enrol on the new Masters programme in Gastronomy and Food Studies.

Global Dining with MA Gastronomy and Food Studies

In the first year of the Masters programme in Gastronomy and Food Studies, there is a group assignment called ‘Global in the Local’. Each week for five weeks, teams of three or four have to curate a meal experience with a global flavour in Dublin city centre. This year, the class sampled Szechuan cuisine in M&L Restaurant in Cathedral Place (see photo) in week one. A selection of Mexican food and drink in El Grito Mexican Taqueria, Mountjoy Square were savoured in week two. In week three, the group explored traditional Korean food and witnessed a demonstration of kimchi making by the owner in Kimchi Hophouse on Parnell Street. There were more Mexican delights and a taste of Mezcal in Café Azteca, Lord Edward Street in week four. The final group made Caipirhinos and Brigadeiro sweets in the college prior to relishing a selection Brazilian food in Wigwam in Abbey Street (see photo). Students research the historical and cultural significance of the meal and present this to their class prior to the meal. The meals are both educational and commensal, enabling networking and sharing of lived experiences.
School Re-inspired Programme

September 2019 marked the start of the new student in-take (photo below) for the school’s Re-Inspired Programme (now in its 3rd year) which is sponsored by Dawn Farms, Inspired ‘Friends of Culinary Arts and TU Dublin. The student uniforms were provided by Mary Coppinger Uniforms Ltd, ‘The brainchild of Dr. Frank Cullen (Head of School, Culinary Arts & Food Technology, TU Dublin) in co-operation with The Merchants Quay, Teach Mhuire, Cuan Mhuire, Casadh and Mendicity Institution (Homeless Services & Rehab Treatment Centres). This innovative and unique programme (presented weekly by James Rock, Lecturer Culinary Arts - centre of photo) imparts the practical skills and knowledge to participants to assist them towards eventually taking up cooking positions in the industry. Our school is proud to support the centres mentioned and the participants which they forward for the Re-Inspired Programme, we also thank James Rock (Lecturer Culinary Arts), Thomas Cooney (Laboratory Assistant, TU Dublin) and the school laboratory and support teams who collectively ensure that the Re-Inspired programme runs smoothly on a weekly basis.

School and Spanish Embassy Work Together

Our school offered warm thanks to the Spanish Embassy in Dublin, Chef Blanca Valencia and Juan Garcia from O’Med family Olive Oils, Grenada, Spain for an excellent presentation and tasting of Extra Virgin Olive Oils (EVOO) and vinegars. Thanks were also to the students who took part and made it an interesting and educational event (Diarmuid Cawley, Lecturer, TU Dublin).

School Welcomes ‘Erasmus Mundus Students Cohort 9’

The School of Culinary Arts & Food Technology is delighted to welcome Cohort 9 Masters Student ‘Food Innovation and Product Design’ (FIPDes) Erasmus Mundus Students (photos below) who will begin their studies with our school in the second semester (see photos). A big word of thanks to all the co-ordinators and lecturers and collaborating universities Dr Roisin Burke & Anna Cruickshank (TU Dublin, School of Culinary Arts & Food Technology, Ireland); Isabelle Laissy, Barbara Rega, Marwen Moussa, Chiara Penon and Manon Chenebault & Giana Perra (Agro Paris Tech, France), Erik Andersson, Jenny Schelin (Lund Institute of Technology, Lund University, Sweden), Paola Piombino & Paola Vita-glione (University of Naples, Italy).
Recruitment: School Presents to Secondary

Our school was invited to present our ‘Careers in Culinary Arts and Food Technology studies’ presentation to a selection of Secondary Schools recently (details below). The school management team have worked together to develop support materials to assist school colleagues and supporters towards circulating the excellent work of our school and the many programmes which we offer from Higher Certificate to PhD levels plus our part-time (CPD) Continuing Professional Development Industry driven programmes. School colleagues wishing to make school presentations for industry and individual schools or groups can you please ensure that you have the school’s POS (Point of Sale) marketing materials [see photos below] for your visits, plus an e-copy of the school PowerPoint presentation. Pull-up banners, pens, rulers, bags, school ‘Inspired’ and programme brochures from the following areas (a) School Office, (b) Assistant Heads of School offices, (c) Business Development Manager’s office.

Listed below are just some of the school’s and ETB’s which colleagues have successfully completed individual school programmes presentation (L-R: Cabinteely CS, Castlenock CC, Rosmini CS, New Cross C, St. Joseph’s School, Synge St). Our thanks to those schools (to date) who have requested our services and are now working closely with the school. It’s crucial that we (all staff and friends) work together to continue to get our message out to as many schools as possible and offer them the opportunity to request one of our individual school programmes presentations.

Musgrave CPD Graduation Day 2019

Dr Frank Cullen and Jim McCauley, School Culinary Arts & Food Technology presented the Continuing Professional Development (CPD) Diplomas in Professional Butchery to Musgrave employees (see photos below) who successfully completed the DT487A programme recently. The CPD Diploma in Professional Butchery Skills Development promotes entry-level careers as Butchery practitioners, participants are also offered a broad and more general range of skills and knowledge in terms of managing and organising meat and culinary operations. This programme meets the needs of MRPI and equips students with skills for development, preparation and presentation of meats and culinary products in a safe, healthy and nutritious manner. Orla Farrell and Anne Marie Lynch, HR Musgrave congratulated the many store owners (including participants), family, friends and the lecturing staff of the School of Culinary Arts and Food Technology, TU Dublin for co-ordinating another excellent CPD Diploma in Professional Skills Development programme. Musgrave employees were also presented with a copy of ‘All in the Food – Celebrating 75 Years of Cathal Brugha Street’ by Dr Frank Cullen, who also invited the successful participants to lunch in the school’s Green Room Training Restaurant (Mike O’Connor, Assistant Head School Culinary Arts & Food Technology, TU Dublin).

Crumlin College visits School: We were delighted to welcome the culinary students of Crumlin College accompanied by Mark Leonard (Head of Catering Department, Crumlin College) to our school recently.

Thanks to Jackie Rigney for capturing Crumlin College’s visit to our school (via these photos)
The School of Culinary Arts and Food Technology, TU Dublin worked closely with the TU Dublin Career Development Centre to deliver the recent ‘TU Dublin Careers Fair’ which attracted over 30 of Ireland’s major food, beverage, pubs, hotel and food service companies to our Cathal Brugha Street, City Campus location. Over 300 students attended to speak with employers about graduate jobs, placement opportunities and seasonal work available. The event was a huge success and feedback from employers was very positive with some looking to book in for next year’s event.

Students visit Guinness Storehouse and the Dublin Liberties Distillery

As a component of their integrated Bar and Beverage Operation studies school students from the Culinary Entrepreneurship (DT416/1-top right photo) the new Bar and Restaurant Management programme (DT426/1-bottom right photo) partook in two educational field trips to explore recent trends and developments in the drinks industry outside the classroom setting. Students were invited to visit the Dublin Liberties distillery (DLD) which is one of the newest distilleries in Dublin city, this visit was quickly followed up by a visit to famous Guinness Storehouse. Both these major visitor attraction locations showcased the positive impact which tourism can have on local drinks businesses in the city. Students were also given the opportunity to understand the production process, the visitor experience and their impact on purchasing decisions in their workplace bars and restaurants in the future. Thanks were offered to Judith Boyle (Lecturer Beverage Management, TU Dublin) for co-ordinating both of these educational visits for the students.
Joshua’s Spicy Mexican flavours wins 7th Monin Cocktail Challenge

The 7th TU Dublin Monin Cocktail Challenge took place recently at TU Dublin Training Bar, City Campus. Over twenty students entered the alcohol free cocktail challenge competition, where recipes were based on Monin premium syrups and purees. The professional external judges were wowed by the flavour combinations and cocktail skills of the first year students. Balaz Kiss (judge) stated that ‘he would serve any of the final cocktails in the Shelbourne hotel’. Points were awarded for appearance, aroma, taste and the commercial appeal of the cocktails, Tom Donohoe (Monin Business Development Manager, Food Solutions Ltd) congratulated the students and awarded prizes to the top three finalists. James Murphy Assistant Head School of Culinary Arts & Food Technology offered thanks to Tom Donohoe (Monin - Sponsors), Ali Dunworth (Judge, Food journalist and consultant), Laura Molloy (Judge, Monin Brand Ambassador), Balaz Kiss (Judge, Shelbourne Hotel), Susan Boyle (Judge, Drinks consultant and international drinks judge) plus Judith Boyle (Lecturer Beverage Management, TU Dublin) and all the competitors who entered. The winners of the 7th TU Dublin Monin Cocktail Challenge were as follows; 1st place (Overall winner) Cocktail Name: ‘Tropic Thunder’ Prepared by: Joshua Keegan. Dublin on-trade faces “unprecedented” competition & differentiation

School supporter the Licensed Vintners Association (LVA) spoke recently of the challenges facing Dublin pubs, Donall O’Keeffe (Chief Executive Officer, LVA) stated that the unprecedented levels of competition and differentiation in the Dublin licensed trade reflect the explosion of new outlets in the capital and means that those pubs and bars already established there “must up their game on wine, cocktails and bottled beers”. Mr O’Keeffe added that “The competition in the city across a number of sectors ranging from high-end restaurant chains to burrito joints has become so competitive. Having a story to tell has become an ongoing battle which is great for the consumer, for standards, for consumer choice and for the number of people now being attracted into town, but pubs have to be operating to such a high level to compete – and I think they are.” Apart from this, the top issues for the Dublin licensed trade remain unchanged, namely the shortage of skilled staff, particularly in the kitchen and bar area and the runaway level of insurance costs, he added. School Student wins Gold at World Cocktail Competition, China

The School of Culinary Arts and Food Technology, TU Dublin wishes to congratulate one of our past studies Oisin Kelly (photo right) on his recent success in winning a Gold medal at the recent World Cocktail Competition held in China. Oisin studied with our school on the BSc (Hons) degree in Bar Studies - Management and Entrepreneurship. Oisin states he had one of the most amazing weeks of his life in China, he practiced relentlessly up to competition and the outcome he states was worth all the work, a gold medal and an award for best young bartender’. Oisin adds that ‘the best part of all was that he got to represent Ireland with filled him with ecstatic pride’. He adds that ‘for all those people wondering about entering the next cocktail competition that comes up, to just go for it, if you lose, wait for the next one and do that one too and repeat the process’. Oisin finishes by stating that ‘it is always about the experience and journey and most importantly the friends we make along the way’, our school congratulates Oisin once again we are equally proud of your World winning achievements.

TU Dublin Staff Site Visit to Country Crest and Ballymaguire Foods

Jackie Rigney, School Business Development Manager recently co-ordinated a staff site visit to TU Dublin’s strategic partners Country Crest/Ballymaguire Foods. Staff across three disciplines attended from the School of Culinary Arts & Food Technology, School of Food Science & Environmental Health and the School of Mechanical & Design Engineering.

Country Crest is a family business dating back to 1910 whose underlying promise and passion to respect and protect the power and purity of the land is very evident. Ballymaguire Foods a sister company to agri-food business Country Crest, is focussed on the production of fresh prepared foods in partnership with leading retail and foodservice customers under private label brands and prides themselves on driving industry standards in quality, service and innovation.

Thank you to Michael Hoey, Managing Director – Country Crest, Ed Spelman, Managing Director - Ballymaguire Foods and all the staff for their time and very kind hospitality when we visited.

Musgrave Marketplace supports School (Source: Hospitality Ireland)

Musgrave Marketplace donates €350k to support TU Dublin’s ‘Transforming Tomorrow’ campaign. Hospitality Ireland reports.

Musgrave Marketplace donates €350k to support TU Dublin’s ‘Transforming Tomorrow’ campaign, which is intended to create a centre of excellence for Ireland’s food and drink sector at T. Dublin’s new Grangegorman campus.

With campuses in Dublin City, Tallaght and Blanchardstown, Technological University Dublin represents a new milestone in Irish higher education, building on the heritage of its renowned organizations – DIT, IT Blanchardstown and IT Tallaght – TU Dublin is inclusive and adaptable, and creates educational opportunities for students at all stages.

The new university offers an open learning experience with pathways to graduation, from apprenticeships to PhDs, in the areas of science, the arts, business, engineering, technology, and, of course, culinary art. With 28,500 students, it is now the largest university in Ireland with a focus on practical-based education informed by the latest research and enabled by technological advances.

The €350,000 investment by Musgrave Marketplace is part of the firm’s ongoing commitment to supporting the progression of the Irish food sector and ensuring it up-ends cooks and future food industry leaders.

The investment is supporting two key initiatives:

1. Musgrave Marketplace Scholarship Programme

The scholarship programme recognises eight high-achieving students studying for bachelor of arts culinary arts honours degrees in business and bachelor of science culinary entrepreneurship honours degrees. Each scholarship is valued at €3,000 and funded on an annual basis.

Upon completion of college, individuals are given the opportunity to work in an internship with Musgrave Marketplace, which aims to encourage students to apply the knowledge they have acquired and concepts about which they have been taught to the practical demands of the workplace.

2. Musgrave Marketplace is supporting four PhD researchers in the School of Culinary Arts and Food Technology

The researches, under the guidance of Musgrave PhD scholars, Sophie O’Donlon and Ciaran Fagan, will identify and map out culinary education and policy across Europe. This is planned to influence the School of Culinary Arts and Food Technology’s strategic mission to develop a centre of excellence for food and drink at T. Dublin in Grangegorman.

It is understood that this new development will benefit the industry through the increased collaboration within world-level education, focused on food innovation and research, by providing a knowledge exchange and access to research.

It is hoped that the research focuses on primary and post-primary education will enhance and encourage the love of food in young people and address social and ethical concerns through the provision of knowledge and the development of a framework to influence change at an early stage of development.

In addition, Musgrave PhD scholar, Caroline McGonigal, will focus on exploring the knowledge base of the impact of food and cooking on the well-being of families and communities and its contribution to rel family and community identity.

The fourth Musgrave PhD scholar, Caroline McGonigal, will research food literacy. This research will extend beyond a narrow concept of food education through nutritional, recommendations and cooking lessons to more-empowering and vital connections between food, people, health and the environment. Both theoretically and practically, it will explore how establishing food literacy programmes will improve hospitality and disadvantage.

Schools Alumni gather in London with TU Dublin

This year’s annual TU Dublin London alumni celebration was held at the iconic London restaurant Bentley’s in Mayfair. Hosted by TU Dublin President Professor David Fitzpatrick and School of Culinary Arts & Food Technology graduate and Michelin star chef Richard Corrigan owner of Bentley’s Oyster Bar & Grill. Our school was well represented in our support to this event as alumnus Bobby Kerr addressed the guests and Dr. Frank Cullen (Head of School), George Smith and Anna Cruickshank (Lecturers School of Culinary Arts & Food Technology, TU Dublin) attended. It was the first event to take place in London since TU Dublin was established earlier this year with graduates from all three TU Dublin campuses all in attendance.

Farmers Market Inspires Culinary Entrepreneurship Students

Brona Raftery (Lecturer Culinary Arts, TU Dublin) reports that recent research and investigation by our schools DT416 First Year B.Sc. Culinary Entrepreneurship students into the most popular foods sold at farmers markets was instrumental in their recent baked goods creations. A large portion of these goods were also kindly distributed to the feed the homeless under the schools food donation project during November.

Schools assists Jones Engineering (Special Donation) Event

Jones Engineering Group donated €1m gift to TU Dublin to support the building of Ireland’s first centre of excellence for Construction education (AEC) in Broombridge. TU Dublin President David Fitzpatrick requested our school to assist with a special event to mark this generous donation. Roseanna Ryan and Dr Elaine Mahon (Lecturers Pastry Arts, TU Dublin) and the DT407.3 students of Major Pastry 1 handmade beautiful chocolates and pastillage (see photos left, right and below) which took them over 2 weeks to complete for the event.

Post Graduate (Masters) Students engage with Strategic Leaders

As part of the on-going series of on-going masterclasses, special lectures and workshops for our school’s MSc Culinary Innovation and Food Product Development Masters Students, Dr Kathleen (Lecturer TU Dublin) invited in Mr. Tom Fennell former Head of Strategy, School of Business, TU Dublin to join her towards assessing students case study final presentations on strategy. The main case study topic for discussion was Copersucar: A World Leader in Sugar and Ethanol. Students really enjoyed Tom’s contribution and unique insight to the case study assessment event. Bord Bia’s Thinking House also supported our Post Graduates by conducting a guest lecture for the school’s MA in Gastronomy and Food Studies (2nd years). The module was Branding and Consumer Culture, the guest presenter demonstrated some insightful data during their presentation on consumer trends and brands based on global research trends (Dr Kathleen Farrell, Lecturer TU Dublin).
Household Management students (1946 cohort) return to City Campus CBS

Mrs Margaret Heery (nee Horan) made cakes for everyone and redecorated the ‘Top Tier’ shortly after the first born of the wedded couple was delivered. Nora Owen (whose mother, Mrs O’Mahony, also taught in Cathal Brugha) and Johnny Giles (football hero) were two of the people remembered by the family, whose wedding cakes were made by Margaret Heery. Icing sugar ornaments were formed on halved Pea or fruit tins, greased with butter, and sometimes her daughters, Sheila, Pat and Kathleen were drafted in often under time pressure to painstaking complete sufficient sets of decorations with a particular design piped with icing sugar just before cake collection. Interestingly, Patricia O’Dea’s wedding ‘breakfast’ was held in what was then called the ‘Common Room’ (3rd Floor) in Cathal Brugha Street, on April 10th, 1950 (right photo). Finally the last picture, Jim Moran’s bar (now, Pipers Corner - on Marlboro Street) is where the family lived, and walked to the College to spend time, mainly weekends with their Grandmother in CBS. These photographic images and stories are with grateful appreciation to Margaret Moran and family).
Irish Food History Field Trip to Collins Barracks

The 2nd years MA Gastronomy and Food Studies students spent the morning of the 26th November 2019 in Collins Barracks on a field trip for their module ‘History of Irish Food: Applying the Past’. They started with a photographic exhibition ‘Ireland in Focus: Photographing the 1950s’, which had work from three well-known photographers: Henri Cartier-Bresson from France, and two Americans photographers, Dorothea Lange and the Paris-based American anthropologist, Robert Cresswell. The students then explored the Museum of Decorative Arts’ collection of material culture and artefacts. They were particularly interested in the food related collections that included an ancient Greek Krater, Methers and Noggins made from oak, Silver Epergnes, sugar castors and dish rings, toasting glasses, claret decanters, oatcake hardening stands and flesh forks. The visit finished with lunch in the Brambles cafeteria before taking the Luas back to afternoon classes.

Innovative Supporters of Professional Industry Research, Education and Development

INSPIRED

Friends of Culinary Arts had assisted the School to enhance our educational provision

The INSPIRED Friends of Culinary Arts Concept is to develop a dialogue between the food and culinary industry and the school to lead food innovation and the quality of the food offered in Ireland.

The entity: Support and assist the development of the school for a better student experience and learning outcomes through food industry stakeholders — food companies, operators, Food retail, Artisan producers, Culinary professionals and Bord Bia, etc. Inspired’s purpose is also to generate funding and resources for the School through it’s connectivity with the food industry for the support of ingredients, facilities, bursaries, professorships, sponsorship, internships for students, expansion of subjects (e.g. Food Photography, Psychology, Packaging, etc.), Inspirational tours and to attract international speakers, demonstrations, develop prototype production areas, bespoke courses for company specific training, working with suppliers and growers.

Organise recruitment fairs for students and food companies to meet, and to keep chefs that have been trained in the Irish food industry in Ireland. The school’s current INSPIRED Friends of Culinary Arts supporters are leading the way to a great future for it’s graduates.
